News

- This week's cover is a preview of the Swifter than Eagles cover; this set of lists, the Biblical Middle East at War, is due out April 09. I am currently dusting off the Mitanni chariots and greasing their wheels with goose fat
- Auntie Mace-Flange our wargames agony aunt answers her first question

Auntie Mace-Flange

Wargames Agony Aunt

- Desperate of Reigate asks whether 25mm is better than 15mm?
- Well Desperate, I always say to Mr Mace-Flange that size isn't everything and that just because you have a large one doesn't mean you can use it properly. So either is fine, just play with them in moderation

About Last Night

- Well 3 games last night: Graham's Ilkhanids were stomped on by Jason's Classical Indians, however Graham's Armenian knights did acquit themselves well against the pachyderms; Dave's NKE has achieved a success versus Steve's Seljuqs, huzzah for the Gypos☺; and finally my Later Ottomans were narrowly beaten by Martin's Palmyrans – highlight for me was my fragmented laylars (impact foot) holding up against a BG of Cataphracts after being routed through by the Janissaries they were supporting, ouch!
- All this means is that Graham narrowly hangs onto 1st place, Jason is now in 2nd and with both of them opening up an early gap between the rest of the back I am (temporarily I fear) in 3rd.
